Prospectus Course Requirement Students will take the Prospectus Course in the second term of their second year and are expected to complete and defend their dissertation prospectus before commencing their final year in the program.
The prospectus course, normally supervised by the department's placement officer, is offered in the Winter term in each academic year. It is graded on a pass/fail basis. It is expected that students will have met regularly with their supervisors prior to taking the course and will begin the course in a position where enough preliminary work has been done to allow the student to produce a first draft of a prospectus by a third of the way through the term.

Prospectus Submission & Defense Requirements

Students are required to develop a prospectus outlining their dissertation project, which they must successfully defend in an oral examination by their Thesis Advisory Committee.

Prospectus Format: The maximum length for a prospectus is 4500 words, including notes, but excluding the bibliography.

Prospectus Defense: The prospectus defense provides an opportunity for a draft of a thesis prospectus to be reviewed by several faculty members who are knowledgeable about the proposed area and topic of the student's thesis before the final version is approved and the student begins to write the dissertation. The intended thesis supervisor is responsible for assembling qualified faculty members, who will then ordinarily serve as readers on the student's Thesis Advisory Committee. The aim is to examine the prospectus, collectively and collegially, to identify omissions and weaknesses and to suggest ways in which content, method, and organization can be improved. The desired outcome is a prospectus that presents a clear, coherent, promising plan of research that can successfully guide a student through the process of writing a thesis.

Thesis Requirement

The central research requirement of the PhD program in Philosophy is the dissertation. This work should exhibit significant scholarly research and originality, and must be submitted and examined in accordance with regulations set out by the School of Graduate and Postdoctoral Studies: see the SGPS Thesis Regulation Guide. In addition, the Department of Philosophy requires the following: that dissertations in Philosophy not exceed 250 pages in length and that students give a departmental talk on the subject of their thesis prior to their defense.
