

PHILOSOP 9230B/PSYCOL 9230B

Issues in Philosophy, Psychology & Neuroscience

M. Anderson

This course explores areas of common interest between philosophy, psychology and neuroscience, including: consciousness, computation, representation, modularity, and embodiment, from both scientific and philosophical perspectives. We will also explore methodological issues, including the power and limitations of fMRI and other brain imaging technologies, and the structure of scientific inference.