Charles Darwin is one of the most important figures in the modern world. His thinking about evolution has revolutionized not only biology but also psychology, sociology, and economics. The first part of this course retraces the steps leading from the first scientific theory of evolution elaborated during the early 1800s to Charles Darwin's Origin of Species, one of the most important books ever published. This survey will lead us into a reflective examination of Darwin's work and responses to it. Along the way, we will examine debates in biology, geology, and the philosophy of science that had a profound impact on Darwin's thinking. The second part of the course introduces key elements of Neo-Darwinism and looks at issues surrounding adaptationism and human evolution. This will be the occasion to explore some debates that evolutionary thinking raised about the development of knowledge, and morality. Finally, the course closes by asking whether there was, indeed, a Darwinian Revolution.

TEXTS

1. Darwin, C. (1859). On the Origin of Species, 1st Edition (available at UWO Bookstore)
2. Extra material available online and on OWL
3. Ruse, M. (2009). Charles Darwin.

OBJECTIVES

Students in this course will develop a good understanding of the conceptual history, structure, and significance of the theory of evolution by natural selection. They will also acquire skills in analyzing and constructing complex arguments, both in discussion and in writing. By approaching the topic of evolution historically, this course aims to make evolutionary biology accessible to the non-specialist. Those who already have a good grasp of contemporary evolutionary theory will enrich their understanding of its complexities and significance, and of both historical and current disagreements about evolution among biologists as well as philosophers of biology. This course is also a great opportunity to develop advanced skills in identifying and formulating philosophical issues and leading discussions in a structured and constructive fashion.

REQUIREMENTS

The final grade will be based upon the following scheme:

Term Paper	35%
Mid-term Paper	25%
Leading Discussion	15%
Weekly assignments	10%
