Course Description/Objectives:

A studio course introducing the basic technical foundations of contemporary media art production, including digital sound, video, DIY electronics, coding, documentation, and online platforms. This lecture/studio course also locates contemporary digital practices within the broader history of cultural production, tracing developments in technology and media arts.

The place of sound in a visual art context is presumed to be secondary—principally playing a support role to the image. But sound art has a trajectory of its own, one that is resolutely interdisciplinary—it intersects with all strands of activities associated with contemporary visual art practices: video and performance art, conceptual and relational practices, installation and institutional critique. It also increasingly (albeit often furtively) goes beyond these disciplinary divides and has presence in other domains in the humanities (language, speech, theatre, etc.), in science and engineering, in medicine, and in the social sciences. Without sound we wouldn't hear a thing. Without sound we would hear only the silence that is also sound.

In this course, students will be obtain extensive production experience as well as theoretical knowledge on a variety of approaches in sound art, with a special concentration on how it intersects with performance art. The spatio-temporal properties of sound and performance will be considered through various filters (phenomenology, physics, narrativity, conceptualism, etc.). The modes of production as well as the methods of diffusion devised by students and by featured artists will be thoroughly investigated.

Learning Outcomes:

Students who successfully complete this course can expect to:

- Develop a knowledge of the diverse contemporary art practices and artists featured in the course and their connected key critical and theoretical frameworks.
- Develop critical thinking and visual and aural analytical skills.
- Develop knowledge of various methodologies, both paradigmatic and idiosyncratic.
- Develop abilities to discern ambiguities and their generative potential.
- Produce innovative and inventive contributions to in-class discussions and through the various assignments.
- Become familiar with the range of professional possibilities afforded to artists, theorists and curators working in sound and performance in and out of the academy.

Equipment Requirements:

- A good computer with a good connection. Given that the course will be entirely online, it would be impossible to take this course without these two basic components.
- A good pair of headphones, a good microphone, a good camera, a good audio recorder. Either your own or borrowed from sign-out,

Course Requirements:

- Students are expected to contribute in class in a thoughtful, timely, informed, focused, sensitive, and respectful manner.
- An insatiable curiosity and a desire to learn, research, experiment and create.

Attendance:

- Attendance, punctuality and preparedness for class are critical.
- University regulations stipulate that if a student misses 15% of their classes, without written corroboration for health or bereavement, they can be debarred from participation in final evaluations and/or critiques.

Assignments/Late Assignments:

Students are expected to complete all assignments on time. Failure to complete assignments without prior arrangements with the instructor will result in a failing grade. With prior discussion, students may hand in late work with a 5% per day deduction from the assignment. Extensions will be given upon official notification from the student's faculty advisor due to documented serious health and bereavement reasons.

Students are expected to contact their instructors within 24 hours of the end of the period of the self-reported absence, unless noted on the syllabus. Students are not able to use the self-reporting option in the following circumstances:

- for exams scheduled by the Office of the Registrar (e.g., December and April exams)
- absence of a duration greater than 48 hours,
- assessments worth more than 30% of the student's final grade,
- if a student has already used the self-reporting portal twice during the academic year

If the conditions for a Self-Reported Absence are not met, students will need to provide a Student Medical Certificate if the absence is medical, or provide appropriate documentation if there are compassionate grounds for the absence in question. Students are encouraged to contact their Faculty academic counselling office to obtain more information about the relevant documentation. Students should also note that individual instructors are not permitted to receive documentation directly from a student, whether in support of an application for consideration on medical grounds, or for other reasons. All documentation required for absences that are not covered by the Self-Reported Absence Policy must be submitted to the Academic Counselling office of a student's Home Faculty.
